Studio Introduction

Abstract landscape and seascape

SYDNEY · 2026

Abstract landscape and seascape, made at scale, in Sydney.

A coherent body of <40>+ works in one language, and a studio producing <30–40> a year.

I paint abstract landscapes and seascapes in acrylic and oil, mostly large, from a studio in Lane Cove. The work has stayed in one territory for <four> years: horizon, water, weather and the moment a landscape stops being a place and becomes a colour.

<I have sold consistently through direct and commissioned channels, principally to Australian collectors and through interior design practices. I am now looking for gallery representation in Sydney and Melbourne.>

The studio can supply a solo hang of <12–18> works, or a consistent supply of <6–10> works a year to a stable, alongside commissioned work.

What the paintings are about.

01

PLACE

The paintings begin from specific places — <the coast between Shoreham and the Apostles, and the escarpment west of Sydney> — and are finished away from them. What survives the studio is not the view but the residue of it: the temperature of the light, the weight of the water, the horizon that has stopped being a line.

02

SURFACE

Structurally the work is built in layers — thin glazes over dragged and scraped ground — so the surface holds a history of its own making. At scale, that history becomes the subject. Standing close, the paintings are texture and incident. At six metres they resolve into weather.

03

TITLE

Titles are taken from the language of experience rather than of place — Stillness, Turbulence, Go With The Flow — because the works are about a state rather than a location.
