Studio Profile
for Art Consultants

SYDNEY · 2026

A studio that works to a brief, a budget and a date.

*You are not looking for an artist to represent.
You are looking for one who will not become a problem on a project you are already accountable for.*

I paint large-scale abstract landscapes and seascapes in Lane Cove, Sydney. The studio produces <30–40> original works a year, plus commissioned work made to a supplied brief.

I understand that your obligation is to your client, not to me. What that means in practice: I quote in writing, I hold the date, I don't approach your client directly, and I don't undercut the price you have placed the work at.

Palette, scale, orientation and finish are all specifiable. Series of related works for multi-room or multi-unit placements are straightforward — that is most of what the studio does.

PROTOCOL

No direct approach to your client. No price undercutting. Written quotes.

Three reasons consultants come back.

01

THE BRIEF IS TAKEN LITERALLY

Send a palette, a dimension and a date and you will get work against those constraints, not an interpretation of them. If a brief cannot be met, you will hear that in the first conversation rather than in week seven.

02

VOLUME WITHOUT REPETITION

A series of eight related works for a development is a different problem from eight separate paintings. The studio is set up for it: shared palette, varied composition, consistent finish, delivered together.

03

THE RELATIONSHIP IS PROTECTED

Your client stays your client. Enquiries that originate from your project are referred back to you, priced consistently with what you have quoted, and never fulfilled around you.

Five steps. Two approval points. One date you can quote to your client.

Nothing is committed to canvas until the concept is approved in writing.

01	BRIEF	You send the scheme, the elevation, the dimensions and the date. A twenty-minute call, or a site visit if you are in Sydney.	WEEK 0
02	CONCEPT	Two to three concepts, each with a colour board keyed to your finishes and a scale drawing against your elevation.	WEEK 1-2
03	APPROVAL	You choose one and confirm palette, size and delivery date in writing. Price is fixed at this point.	WEEK 2
04	STUDIO	The work is made. One progress image at the halfway mark. Revisions to palette are possible until the final glazing stage.	WEEK 3-8
05	DELIVERY	Cured, varnished, signed, documented and packed. Delivered and hung, or crated for freight.	WEEK 9-10

Send me a live brief and you'll have a costed response inside a week.

Palette, dimensions, quantity, budget band, delivery date. You will get back a shortlist of existing work that fits, a concept for anything that needs making, a firm price and a firm date — at no cost and no obligation.

If the answer is that the studio is wrong for the project, you will get that too, in the first reply rather than the fifth.
