Studio Profile
for Interior Designers

SYDNEY · 2026

Original artwork, specified like any other finished element.

Most projects don't fail on taste. They fail because the right piece is the wrong size, the wrong palette, or six weeks too late.

I paint large-scale abstract landscapes and seascapes from a studio in Lane Cove, Sydney. Almost all of it is made for a specific room, in a specific palette, to a specific date.

Designers come to me at the point where the wall is too big, too visible, or too particular for anything available off a gallery floor. I work from your scheme — the joinery, the stone, the textiles, the light at four in the afternoon — and return two or three concepts before anything is committed to canvas.

The work is original, signed, documented and insured to value. It arrives ready to hang. You keep control of the frame, the palette and the date.

Three reasons a client pays for an original.

01

SCALE

Above about 1,600 mm the market thins out fast, and what remains is usually a print. A painting made to the wall is often the only way to hold a double-height space without filling it with three smaller works that fight each other.

02

CONTROL OF THE PALETTE

A sourced work is a compromise between what exists and what the room needs. A commissioned work starts from your scheme. If the stone shifts warmer at specification stage, the painting shifts with it.

03

IT CANNOT BE FOUND ANYWHERE ELSE

Clients who have spent two years on a house notice when the artwork is available online. An original with a signed certificate, a title and a documented provenance reads differently — and it is the one element of the scheme that appreciates rather than dates.

Five steps. Two approval points. One date.

Nothing is committed to canvas until you have approved a concept in writing.

01	BRIEF	You send the scheme, the elevation, the dimensions and the date. A twenty-minute call, or a site visit if you are in Sydney.	WEEK 0
02	CONCEPT	Two to three concepts, each with a colour board keyed to your finishes and a scale drawing against your elevation.	WEEK 1-2
03	APPROVAL	You choose one and confirm palette, size and delivery date in writing. Price is fixed at this point.	WEEK 2
04	STUDIO	The work is made. One progress image at the halfway mark. Revisions to palette are possible until the final glazing stage.	WEEK 3-8
05	DELIVERY	Cured, varnished, signed, documented and packed. Delivered and hung, or crated for freight.	WEEK 9-10

TERMS

«50% deposit confirms the commission and the delivery date. Balance on completion, before dispatch. If the approved concept is not delivered as agreed, the deposit is returned in full.»

Send me a project and I'll tell you honestly whether I'm the right studio for it.

If you have a wall you have not solved, send the elevation and the finishes schedule. Within a week you will have two or three works from the register that fit, or a concept sketch if nothing existing does — at no cost, and with no expectation that you proceed.

The studio in Lane Cove is open by appointment, most weekdays. Seeing a three-metre painting in person answers questions a PDF cannot, and it is the fastest way to find out whether this is worth either of our time.
